* *

Born around 1934.

A leader of the African People's Democratic Union of South Africa.

An attorney from Pietermaritzburg. He was banned in 1964 for five years. When the ban expired, he was placed under house arrest for a further five years.

He was detained in 1971 and held for several months before the trial began. During this detention, his wife, Nina, who had also been detained, applied to the court to restrain the police from assaulting him. The application was refused.

He was charged with 12 others in the Pietermaritzburg Supreme Court in August 1971 on four counts under the Terrorism Act: 1. being a member or supporter of UMSA and APDUSA and conspiring to help people to undergo military and political training; 2. participating in secret meetings and collecting funds; 3. inciting people to undergo military training; 4. assisting "terrorists."

He was convicted on counts 1, 2 and 4, in April 1972 and sentenced to 21 years' imprisonment, 13 to run concurrently, making an effective sentence of 8 years.

During the trial, several of the accused gave details of torture they had received during interrogation.

While in prison on Robben Island, Hassim was placed in solitary confinement as a result of a petition he had presented to the officer commanding the prison. It claimed that certain basic rights and privileges had been withdrawn. In April 1973, Nina Hassim and wife of another prisoner brought a court action in the Cape Town Supreme Court to order the commanding officer to restore the privileges. The judge ordered that Hassim be removed from solitary confinement.

In February 1978, the Natal Law Society struck Hassim off the roll of attorneys.

(See under other accused in the trial - e.g. Mahanjana, Mbele, Moeng, Vimba, Vusani, Wilcox, Zimambane).

NOTE

I prepared these biographical notes etc.- mainly of Indian South Africans who were imprisoned and banned - for ready reference for my own research on Indian South Africans.

They are very incomplete and in many cases outdated. I keep revising and adding from time to time. In many cases, I make only a brief reference, since more detailed data is in my files and articles.

E. S. Reddy

Incomplete
NAMES OF RESISTERS IN 1946-48

(The names are taken from my file of Passive Resister which is missing a few issues; and photocopies of only some issues of Flash. It is therefore very incomplete. There may be many typing or spelling errors in the sources and therefore many duplicates in this list).
